

Raw Edge Ruffle Scarf

- 1 yard of material, 44/45" width (silk blend, soft linen, or cotton fabric is ideal)
- Thread that coordinates with your fabric

1. Fold the right sides of your fabric together so that the fabric is folded in half lengthwise. Mark and cut ten 22"x2" strips on the fold. Mark and cut two 16"x 6" strips on the fold.
2. Baste stitch down the center of each ruffle strip. Gently pull the basting thread and each strip to to ruffle the fabric. With the right sides of fabric facing up, pin 1 ruffle to the center (3-inch mark) of each 6-inch by 32-inch scarf section. (You may need to adjust the ruffles on the strip slightly to ensure it fits along the entire scarf). The ruffle ends should be evenly aligned with the scarf ends).
3. Stitch the ruffle to each scarf section. Repeat this process, adding two ruffles to each side of the center ruffle, sewing one ruffle at a time. The centers of the ruffles will be approximately 1-inch apart. Ruffles will (and should overlap). Sew ruffles onto the second piece of scarf fabric in the same fashion.
4. Pin the right sides of the scarf base (the side with the ruffles) together at the short (6-inch) side. Sew scarf together (using a 1/2-inch allowance) to form one long scarf. Trim any loose threads from sewing.
